

HISTORY

Year

66-The latest addition to the truck line was the four wheel drive Bronco utility vehicle. Built on a 92" wheel base, the Bronco was powered by the 170ci inline 6 and later in the year, the 289ci V8 became optional. The Bronco was available in 3 styles, the standard Bronco was the Roadster, with no roof or doors and a fold down windshield; the sport utility was a pickup with a bolted on, removable steel roof over the front seat; and the Bronco wagon came with a full length roof and large side windows.

67-New additions to the basically unchanged Bronco included variable-speed windshield wipers, padded sun visors, back-up lights, a dual master brake cylinder and self-adjusting brakes. The sports utility model is now called a pickup. A new Sports Package available for the wagon and pickup included bright horn rings, headlight bezels, tail light bezels, tailgate handle, windshield rails, instrument panel trim, side window frames, a grille, chrome plated bumpers with bumper guards, dual armrests, trimmed headboard liner, wheel covers, cigar lighter and a floor mat for the wagon.

68-The Bronco continued with the same body shell which now got side marker lights on the front and reflectors on the lower rear quarter panels. The front bumpers were new as well, featuring curved rather than squared off ends. The interior's door handles and window cranks were improved, and a heater and defroster were standard. free-wheeling front hubs and the Bronco's swing away spare tire carrier were new.

69-The Bronco roadster model was deleted and the other Bronco models got minor cosmetic changes. However, many mechanical improvements were made to reduce noise and improve Bronco's structural integrity, including elimination of the Bronco's folding windshield.

70-The most noticeable change on the Bronco was the now flush mounted side marker lamps, which were also positioned higher. The base engine was still the 170ci, 105hp inline six. The Sports Package still included bright exterior moldings and trim, an argent grille, Parchment pleated upholstery, floor mats, lighter, chrome front and rear bumpers, wheel covers and Sport Bronco emblem.

71-Basically no changes were made to the Bronco. It did get a heavier duty front axle and 12.7 gallon gas tank. Only three speed manual transmission available.

72-Basically no changes were made to the Bronco. When fitted with the optional 302ci V8 engine, bucket seats and a 3.5:1 rear axle were included.

73-Bronco now one model series, as the pickup version was dropped. Base engine was 200ci version of the inline six, and the 302ci V8 was optional. Power steering and the Cruise-O-Matic transmission were new options on the V8 equipped Broncos.

74-Exterior was unchanged. Selector dial for transmission was lighted and a dome light replaced the map light, which became an option. New is a different steering gear mechanism. Six cylinder engine was phased out during the year.

75-Exterior was unchanged but underwent several mechanical changes, including new use of a catalytic converter.

76-Mechanical enhancements like heavier axle and front disc brakes were made. New options included front stabilizer bar, quicker power steering system and heavy-duty shocks. Also new was the Special Décor Group consisting of a blacked-out grille, color-keyed hood and bodyside tape stripe, bright windshield moldings and window frames and bright wheel covers. 200ci inline six with a 3 speed transmission. Optional was the 302ci V8 and Cruise-O-Matic automatic transmission.

77-The Bronco had minor refinements for its last year with this body style.

78-Beginning with the 1978 model year, Bronco was completely redesigned, bearing no relationship with the earlier models. 1978-79 Bronco is built on an F150 pickup chassis. The 1978-79 models are identical insofar as equipment goes. Engine availability was limited to a base 351 ci V8 with an optional 400 V8 also available.

80-The 4x4 Bronco trimmed down a bit for 1980. Although the front end treatment resembled the 1978-79 models, it was different. The grille was revised and the parking lights were now recessed directly beneath the headlights. New wrap-around tail lights were used. Also new was twin beam independent front suspension, replacing the former rigid axle.

81-Styling of the four-wheel drive Bronco was unchanged for 1981. Standard features included: bucket seats, vinyl sun visors, padded instrument panel, arm rests, door lock buttons and inside hood release.

82-The 4x4 Bronco received a mild facelift for 1982. The revised grille had only three vertical bars and the Ford script in an oval emblem in its center. This emblem was also placed on the lower left corner of the tailgate.

83-Styling of the four-wheel drive Bronco was carried over from the previous year. Convenience options included a headlight-on warning buzzer. The underhood light had a 20-foot cord.

84-Styling of the four-wheel Bronco was carried over from the previous year. Standard features included: black front and rear bumpers; bright hubcaps and black scuff plates. Options included an underhood tool box.

85-Outside of some new options, the four-wheel drive Bronco was unchanged for 1985. New options included white styled steel wheels.

86-The attractive full-sized Bronco was basically unchanged for 1986. The Eddie Bauer Bronco included two-tone paint, dual bodyside paint stripes, privacy glass, all terrain raised white-letter tires and Eddie Bauer garment and equipment bags.

87-Ford introduced smoother more aerodynamic body styling. New aerodynamic, impact-resistant headlights with easy-to-install halogen bulbs replaced the old inset sealed beam style. The interior was also redesigned for a more streamlined appearance. Standard equipment now included rear wheel anti-lock braking system, power steering and power brakes. The 4.9L and 5.0L engines now had Electronic Fuel Injection and serpentine drive belts. The Eddie Bauer Trim package was offered and a 4,000 lb. chrome step bumper became standard.

88-Electronic Fuel Injection and serpentine drive belts became standard for all engines. Manual transmissions were now 5-speed.

89-Basic styling was unchanged for 1989. The 4-speed manual transmission was brought back as an option.

90-An all new heavy-duty E40D electronically controlled 4-speed automatic transmission was offered with the 5.8L engine and was later available with the 4.9L and 5.0L.

91-In commemoration of 25 years of Ford sports utilities, a Bronco silver anniversary model was offered. An all black Night model was offered with aluminum deep dish wheels and a handling package.

92-The grille was redesigned with park and turn signal lamps now fully under the headlights and wrapping around the side. Two vertical bars on the grille replaced the three-bar style used since 1982.

93-Four-wheel ABS became standard equipment. The Night model and the 4.9L engine were no longer available. The transfer case became the New Process 200.

94-A driver's side airbag became standard equipment. The XLT sport package was introduced with bright red exterior paint and body-colored cab steps.

95-The XLT sport package continued with bright red exterior paint and body-colored cab steps.

96-The last year of production offered no significant changes besides the new signal mirrors offered with the XLT and Eddie Bauer Series.
